FAULKNER PERRIN CUSTOM HOMES

The mission of Faulkner Perrin Custom Homes rests on a set of clear, but demanding standards for every project. "Ahead of schedule, under budget, and the entire journey characterized by two words: joy and excitement," CEO Scott Faulkner says. Together, Faulkner and company president Kirk Perrin achieve this and more, while putting a fresh twist on several timeless classics. "When you enter a Faulkner Perrin home, you notice natural light, open floor plans and exquisite detail in every room," Perrin says. The firm's portfolio boasts an impressive versatility, with styles including California Mediterranean, modern Tudor, Cape Cod, Santa Barbara, classic traditional, modern farmhouse, and Hill Country transitional. This amassment of stunning work began when Faulkner and Perrin (friends since the eighth grade) saw a void in the market and the potential behind their uniquely different skill sets. Faulkner handles sales, marketing and investment fund management, while Perrin handles the construction side of the business. Along with the desire to execute their individual roles with excellence, Faulkner and Perrin are guided by an intention to be highly involved with each client. "We want to be a part of our customers' lives after construction, as we introduce them into the Faulkner Perrin family," Faulkner says. "I feel, and our clients have confirmed, that we bring a reputation of comfort and ease to the home building process that is one of a kind. My favorite part of the business is seeing the delight and satisfaction when people move in and contact us right after their first holiday season, just to tell us how much they love us and their fabulous home. What a privilege—and an honor!"

Ask the Expert

What inspires you?

Collaboration. We partner with the finest designers and architects—award-winning firms with a deep reservoir of talent—to bring our customers' greatest desires to fruition.

Your firm's philosophy?

We want to change how people feel about building a custom home. At the end of each job, we want the homeowner to be elated that their home was completed under budget and on time (not 12-18 months later, as many horror stories go).

What elements characterize your work?

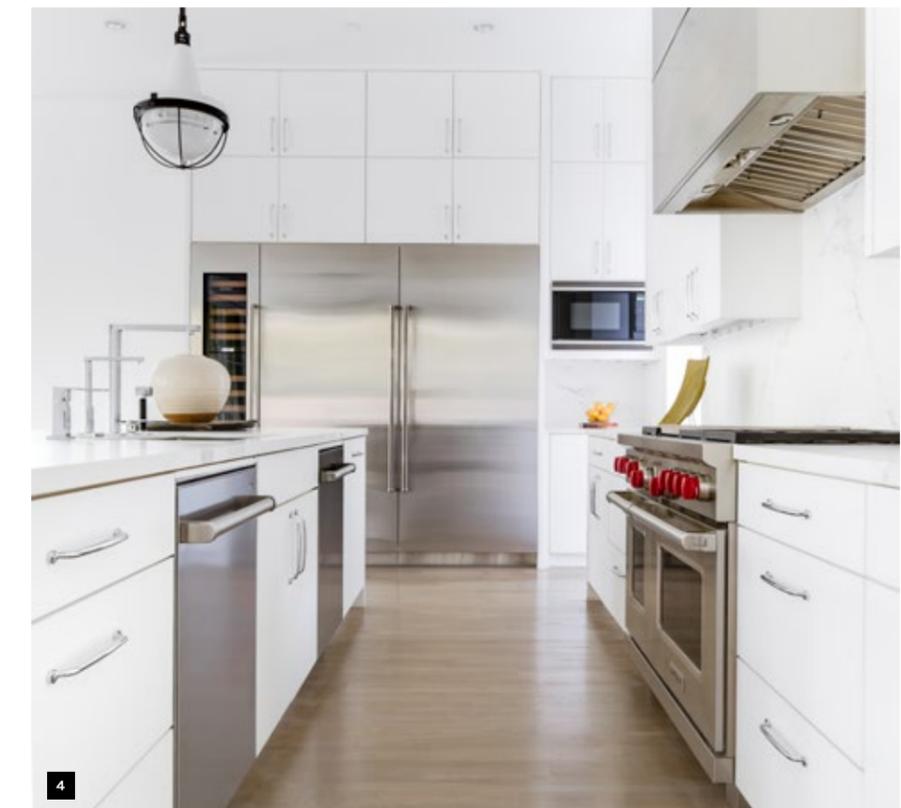

Early on, we partnered with David Stocker of shm architects, so you'll see a lot of floor-to-ceiling windows, rooms flooded with natural light and enormous outdoor living areas with deep, covered loggias. We like to create gathering areas for the family, and true connections between indoor and outdoor living spaces.

“We want every new client to feel like they just made one of the best investments of their life, and to be proud that they own a Faulkner Perrin home.”

1. A brilliant white bathroom, with abundant light, makes for a breathtaking experience upon entry each morning. 2. Grass-cloth wallcoverings and a 10-foot, floor-to-ceiling window contribute to this study's masculine theme. 3. Faulkner Perrin brought Santa Barbara to the heart of Preston Hollow. Ocean-themed, this home features light-blue, 10-foot floor-to-ceiling windows, a front courtyard and sitting area, and a fabulous outdoor patio. 4. This kitchen features Sub-Zero's latest wine/refrigerator combo, along with dual Asko dishwashers and a Wolf range, creating a sleek and stunning modern look.
